Introduction

Valentine's Day is one of the most popular occasions celebrated by all. It happens every year in the month of February and is a time when love is celebrated – love between lovers, love between family members and friends. And it presents a great opportunity for people to say “I Love You” to others and also to show thanks for the different kinds of love they experience in their lives.

The main message to be communicated on Valentine's Day is “I Love You”. Of course, you might have the intention to convey to the person that he/she is the most important person in the world to you. Whatever your message is, you need to sit down and think about what you want to tell your sweet valentine.

Then next, how on earth do you get this message from your heart to the one you love?

There is of course the straightforward way of just saying “I Love You” to the person straight.

But one of the best ways to start is by picking out a Valentine's present. Your Valentine's present can be just a card that says “I Love You” or a beautiful bouquet of flowers. But whatever the gift you choose, it has to express the message that you want to convey to the person.

However, a card and flowers are just some of the common gift ideas that people have. What else can you give to warm the heart and please the mind of your love?

That's the purpose of this book and the following information is intended for those of you who may or may not have a clue what to get for your Valentine when the month of amore rolls around.

You are about to discover the top 25 gift ideas for your valentine. These gift ideas have been carefully researched and are hugely popular with males. This list of gifts will be useful to the young and inexperienced as well as those who just need some more ideas to spark off their imagination. The best thing is each of these ideas is intended to help you convey your message of love to your valentine.

If you are only reading this book in the eleventh hour, you'll be happy to know that you have quick links within the book to help you order the gifts as soon as possible, in time for the occasion.

Keep in mind that it's the thought that counts and is the key to having a wonderful Valentine's Day. When you are able to give a thoughtful gift to the person you hold most dear to your heart, it conveys a lot more and most importantly, your message of love you have for the person.

Let's dive straight into the 25 gift ideas now!

1. Assassin's Creed: Brotherhood

The third installation to the Assassin's Creed series, Assassin's Creed: Brotherhood, is an action game for Xbox 360 which is set in both present and ancient time period. While one may think that this is merely an expansion pack to its predecessors, it has proven itself to more than that. In this third installation, the story plot of the game has been further developed, making this more than just an ordinary action game where there is unnecessary violence. Furthermore, players will find that the graphics in this game have been improved from its predecessors'. Players may also find it easy to immerse themselves in this game as controls of the game have mostly remained the same. These factors have contributed to a better gaming experience.

Players will be able to choose between two modes of playing. Firstly, they can choose to play as a single player and take up the role of Ezio, a legendary Master Assassin who is on a mission to prevent the extinction of his order by working together with other assassins to defeat their enemies. Players can also choose to instead compete with other players around the world in multiplayer mode, where they are able to create their own characters, choose their unique weapons and pick up special assassination techniques. This ability to play against other players was not available prior to the release of this game in this series.

This will definitely be a wonderful gift for those who have loved the other games in this Assassin's Creed franchise.

24. Deluxe Acrylic Football Display

Is he a football fan? Well, here is a deluxe acrylic football display from BCW which would be a great way to keep and display his most treasured football. It can be used to commemorate first touchdowns, first games won or even a football which was signed by his favourite football player from the National Football League. Not only is the acrylic used durable, it is also a material which can absorb ultraviolet radiation so as to prevent the memorabilia in the case from yellowing caused by prolonged exposure to ultraviolet light. This will help to keep the football in a pristine condition for many years to come and keep intact all of the precious memories associated with the football, making that special day seem just like yesterday. As the acrylic display is made of quality construction, it will definitely be durable. The case also crystal clear, making it every detail of the football visible when it is seen through the display.

Moreover, the back of the football display is covered with a mirror to further showcase the treasured football. Gold risers are also placed at the base to allow for optical presentation of the football. As such, this is an elegant way of displaying important collectibles that is just about museum worthy.

This will certainly be a great display case to store, display as well as protect any memorabilia that is close to his heart. It will also become the attention-grabbing centrepiece of any room it is placed in.
